Sometimes one can be right but be wrong. Yesterday, prices came within ½ cent of getting my next Old Crop Corn sale off. We were a penny from getting our next New Crop Corn sale off. I put those price objectives at the FC/CC numbers since Corn prices had consistently been turning at the high end range every time. Usually I shade the FC/CC numbers by 2 cents. I should have done that for the last Corn orders and we would have been filled right at the top. I apologize for the mis-judgement.

My Cash Grain Indicator is giving me a sell signal for Old Crop Corn. In my analysis in the last twenty four hours, it appears that Crude Oil is heading down to near $40. If this is the case, Ethanol margins are going to be tight and it may pressure the high Corn prices down. Corn prices are falling some tonight as I write this. Therefore cancel the orders we had for selling Old Crop Corn and New Crop Corn and sell 5% more of your Old Crop Corn bringing you to 65% sold. Sell 5% more of your New Crop Corn for a delivery time that works for you, bringing you to 20% sold. Use Cash contracts, do not use Hedge to Arrives.

In about another week, I will have the January research done and will be able to share that with you.

Plan to attend one of the February seminars. Feel free to bring a friend or neighbor. If they sign up with us, you get 50% off of your next renewal. Schedules are on our website and we sent out two brochures to everyone to share with someone.
